

Take the next step in your surveying career

Join a dynamic and growing firm of expert surveyors

“Earl Kendrick is like one big, diverse family. Every week I attend five or more meetings with different colleagues on a variety of projects, and meet new challenges and rewards.”

Samuel James BA (HONS)
Building Surveyor

Earl Kendrick Project & Building Consultancy is a dynamic and growing firm of expert surveyors and an industry leader when it comes to innovation in both established and new surveying services

That's why we are looking for talented people to join our team and help lead the development of our industry.

Whether you are a recent graduate, an experienced director or somewhere in between, if you have talent and drive, we'd love to hear from you. We are especially keen to talk to surveyors with the entrepreneurial flair to start new businesses and service lines. Above all, we value personality over experience. If you are the right fit for Earl Kendrick in terms of values and attitude, we will find a place for you whatever stage of your career you are in. And wherever you are based — we have offices throughout England and practise fully flexible and hybrid working — though from April 2023 our headquarters will be in a trophy office building in central London.

“I learn something new every day at Earl Kendrick. Rotating within different departments has greatly expanded my knowledge, and the whole team is incredibly supportive.”

Sharif Rajabally MSc
Building Surveyor

Are you a graduate surveyor looking to broaden your experience?

We offer a structured APC programme with in-house assessors. We also rotate graduate surveyors through our various speciality surveying areas to give you wide experience and help you find where you have most to offer and to learn. Our whole team is supportive of younger colleagues and we take pride in seeing them flourish.

Are you a senior surveyor looking to take the step up to leadership?

This is an exciting time to join Earl Kendrick, as we want all colleagues to take on more responsibility. For those who already have solid industry experience, that means taking a lead by overseeing colleagues and developing new services. If you have the potential to do more than you are currently being asked to do, we will help you realise your ambitions.

Are you a director looking for fresh and rewarding challenges?

We understand that what established directors look for in a new practice is the ability to shape its future, and a willingness to do that is exactly what we look for when bringing in senior leaders. We want directors who can lead Earl Kendrick into new pastures and help us flourish, and we reward that kind of leadership with a share of equity so the benefits are equitably shared.

Are you a surveyor with a passion for entrepreneurship?

The Earl Kendrick family is comprised of a number of specialist businesses, and our model of growth is based on fostering new services to meet the changing demands of the property industry. That means we are happy to provide a home for entrepreneurial surveyors who would otherwise start independent businesses. We are keen to invest in the right people and use our capital and experience to incubate and support new business lines and services.

Wherever you are in your career, if you are an ambitious and creative chartered surveyor, there could well be a place for you at Earl Kendrick Project and Building Consultancy.

We are interested in quality rather than quantity, so we aim to bring in the right people whenever we can. Joining Earl Kendrick means being part of a high-performing team with a collaborative and enjoyable culture. We offer profits shares and bonuses as well as equity where appropriate, and we care about what you do, not when, so our people have unlimited annual holidays. Most of all, we want creative input from the whole team, so we have an open door policy for all team members.
